DYLAN JOHNSON

Dylan Johnson is an associate attorney who works in the firm's Trusts, Estates & Wealth Preservation practice group. Her practice focuses on estate planning and tax law matters, including working with clients on estate planning portfolios and implementing changes to their will and trust documents, serving as a witness to will signings, drafting trust amendments, and creating operating agreements such as living trust agreements, declarations and certifications of trust, and last wills and testaments. She also has experience drafting operating agreements, independent contractor agreements, and amendments to Articles of Organization.

With a biology degree, and originally on the way to medical or veterinary school, Dylan actually served as a zookeeper intern at the Reid Park Zoological Society! During a career fair in college, however, the advice from a sage attorney made her realize that her analytical thinking and reasoning skills would actually be better served in the legal profession. To this day, she enjoys working with her clients, and the challenging, mental exhilaration that the legal field provides.

Away from work, you'll probably find Dylan at a country music concert, or cheering on the University of Arizona basketball team and the Penn State football squad.
